Four-legged walkers raise support

Walkers made their way through Coleman Park on two legs and four Saturday morning with one common goal.

The third annual Relay for Paws dog walk raised about $200 for the Brownfield Animal Shelter and various services for its furry occupants, including vaccinations and spaying and neutering in effort to ultimately reduce overpopulation and resulting euthanasia.

"It's something for everybody to get together and support the animal shelter," said event co-coordinator Tracie Bateman. "Our goal is to cut the number of animals that have to be put down a year."

The turnout of approximately 15 participants and their canine companions was similar to last year. They made their way through the park's 1.5 mile makeshift course while enjoying the crisp, fall weather and chatting with fellow animal lovers.

"We were walking the dogs and petting Mattie," said 7-year-old Ali Moore, referring to a chihuahua owned by Kristi Phillips and dressed in a comfy sweater.

"We raised money for a good cause," added participant Karina Stults. "The weather was perfect."

The animal shelter's next fundraiser will be their annual "Howloween" Pet Costume Contest, set for 10 a.m. Saturday, Oct. 27 at the Coleman Park Amphitheater. The $10 registration fees will also benefit the shelter. For more information call 585-6363 or (325) 226-2672.
