A crew member eyed a yard line on artificial turf being laid this week inside the indoor training facility adjoined to the field house at Cub Stadium. The installation is expected to take about a week.

If you feel rested and rejuvenated this Sunday morning, it's likely because you got an extra hour of sleep -- if you remembered to turn your clocks back.

Daylight Saving Time, which has been in effect since March, will come to an end at 2 a.m. Sunday, when Americans across most of the country will "fall back" and set their clocks back one hour for the return of Standard Time on the first Sunday of November.

Daylight Saving Time was instituted in the United States during World War I in order to save energy for war production by taking advantage of the later hours of daylight between April and October.

During World War II the federal government again required the states to observe the time change. Between the wars and after World War II, states and communities chose whether or not to observe Daylight Saving Time.

In 1966, Congress passed the Uniform Time Act, which standardized the length of Daylight Saving Time.

Daylight Saving Time is four weeks longer since 2007 due to the passage of the Energy Policy Act in 2005.

The Act extended Daylight Saving Time by four weeks from the second Sunday of March to the first Sunday of November, with the hope that it would save 10,000 barrels of oil each day through reduced use of power by businesses during daylight hours.

Officially, the law requires businesses and timekeeping institutions to change clocks at 2 a.m. when time changes occur.

But you can change your clocks at a more convenient time (i.e. at bedtime the night before, or when you wake the following morning.)

Just remember that when you wake up, businesses and schools will have changed their clocks and you will need to adjust your schedule accordingly.

Voters head to polls

In a record-breaking early voting turnout, Terry County voters have proven to mirror the national interest in Tuesday's General Election.

When early voting ended at 5 p.m. Friday, 2,342 Terry County residents had already voted in the race to decide several issues on a local, state and national level.

Locally contested races highlight the ballot this year in Terry County for Sheriff, County Attorney and County Commissioner.

In the Sheriff's race, incumbent Republican Larry Gilbreath is being challenged by Democrat Albert Flores, a longtime deputy in the department.

Incumbent Democrat Ramon Gallegos will try to maintain his post as County Attorney against political newcomer Jo'Shae Ferguson-Worley, a Republican.

In the Commissioners' race in Precinct 3, former commissioner Don Robertson, a Republican, is vying for the position against Cecil Castilleja, a Democrat.

At the national level, citizens will select a United States Representative and Senator and decide between President Barack Obama, a Democrat, and his Republican challenger Mitt Romney in the race for the White House.

Chamber to feat grape growers

If you like good wine and good times, the Brownfield Chamber of Commerce has a night in store for you.

The third annual Terry County Grape Growers Reception is now set for 7 p.m. Saturday, Nov. 17 at St. Anthony's Catholic Church fellowship hall. Tickets are $35 and available at the Chamber.

Guests will receive samples of a variety of different locally-produced wines, as well as a full meal this year. Organizers are still finalizing menu options, but will likely serve salad, lasagne and a chocolate dessert.

By featuring Terry County wines, chamber staff and volunteers hope the reception will help promote one of the area's fastest-growing industries, as well as give guests an unforgettable evening.

"It's going to be a fun event and a great success," said chamber board member Buzz Timmons. "It's going to spotlight a growing industry in Terry County."

They also anticipate a good crowd, and encourage the community to attend.

"It's a public event - we invite anyone who's interested to buy tickets," Timmons said.

Cap*Rock Winery of Lubbock will cater the event and provide the pairing expertise.

The Lubbock restaurant D'Vine Wines will participate, and a silent auction with wine baskets and Christmas trees will be held through the event.
